NARF Post-Doctoral Investigator Award 2020

NARF announces their annual award for outstanding independent health/medical/biomedical research achievements by an Australian postdoctoral researcher at an early stage of their career. The intention of the Award is to recognize such achievement and to encourage the career aspirations of young Australian investigators in health/medical/biomedical research.

The NARF Postdoctoral Award for 2020 is AUD $1500

Selection process:

The Awardee is determined by a committee of NHMRC Fellows, based on consideration of the applicant's: (a) CV; and (b) single best first*- or senior-authored publication.

Eligibility:

The applicant must be:

Australian citizen or permanent resident (please state in application)

Within first 5 years (at August 31st, 2020) of receiving their research doctorate.

How to apply:

Applicants should forward a SINGLE PDF FILE containing (1) their SINGLE best first-authored work over the past five years, including a statement (1 page max) of its significance and its relationship to the impact of other work in their curriculum vitae and (2) their full CV, including a full list of published works (authors, title, journal details). The CV should include the date of the doctoral award, citizenship status and all academic and research achievements. Only electronic applications will be accepted (named: Surname_ NARF PD AWARD 2020), and late applications will not be considered.

Deadline: Applications must be submitted by 5pm Monday, November 16th, 2020 to:

NARF PD AWARD PANEL

Dr Gina Ravenscroft, The Harry Perkins Institute of Medical Research, Centre for Medical Research, The University of Western Australia, Perth, 6009, Western Australia, Australia.
